To Whom It May Concern:

I met Dr. Jordan seven years ago while I was offering mentorship and guidance for start-up companies in Puerto Rico. Dr. Jordan's unique talents were reflected in her award-winning start-up venture, GuardDV, Inc. Her passion and commitment to this remarkable business undertaking was focused on offering technological solutions for survivors of gender violence. To me, the determination and contribution she displayed during the incubator program, combined with the awards her start-up received, demonstrated her commitment, vision and leadership qualities needed to achieve her goals.

Dr. Jordan is a force to reckon with, even beyond business. I learned about her passion for Puerto Rican causes, especially education, in my interactions with her. I have continued to track her progress throughout her political career and I believe she is exceptionally positioned to fulfill the responsibilities in the position of President of the University of Puerto Rico.
